UNIONS DISCUSSING LEGISLATION IN MASSACHUSETTS.

TEXTILE LABOR INTERESTS GATHER IN BOSTON WITH ALL STATE UNIONS REPRESENTED.

BOSTON, Jan. 10—A convention of the important textile labor interests of Massachusetts was opened today in Faneuil Hall, with all of the unions of the State represented. This is the first time that such a convention has been called to consider the matter of discussing labor legislation that is desired at the coming session of the legislature. Heretofore the textile unions from various parts of the state have had matters that they desired to get before the legislature, and because of no agreement before hand among the unions there was not much uniformity in the manner in which the desired labor legislation was presented. It has always been said that the New Bedford and Fall River unions by reasons of their being the largest textile labor bodies in the state, have directed efforts to the exclusion of matters of legislation desired by textile labor interests elsewhere.

CALHOUN TO BE TRIED FOR BRIBERTY AT 'FRISCO.

ALLEGED THAT HE WAS ONE OF THE MEN "HIGHER UP" IN THE RECENT CARNIVAL OF GRAFT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 10—Patrick Calhoun, the millionaire traction magnate of the Golden Gate City, will again be placed on trial this week, the case having been set for today. Francis J. Heney will have nothing more to do with the prosecution of the bribery cases, having been defeated for district attorney last November by Charles M. Fickert. Fickert will have a full and clean sweep at the case. Calhoun is charged with bribery, and alleged to be one of the men "higher up" in the recent carnival of graft in San Francisco. The defeat of the "reform" or "muck-raking" element in the November elections, it is intimated is an indication that the prosecution of Calhoun will not be so determined or vindictive as in the past.

MEETING OF VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING WAS HELD SATURDAY NIGHT AT WHICH MUCH BUSINESS WAS TRANSACTED.

The meeting of the Volunteer Fire Department held at the City Hall on Saturday night was well attended and considerable business was put through.

The meeting was called for the purpose of receiving a report from the committee on constitution and by-laws and rules of companies, which was adopted by the department, and Presidential G. H. Seaman was authorized to have printed 200 copies of the same for the use and information of the members.

It was decided to incorporate and a committee was appointed to take the necessary steps for this purpose.

Fire Chief H. T. Titus was requested to ask City Council to furnish 1000 additional feet of hose, five hydrant stop valves and two more hose reels.

H. T. Titus, Conrad Stallenbord and E. L. Goss were appointed a committee to arrange for the forming of separate companies.

An amendment to the constitution was proposed in regards to the initiation age of members, changing it from twenty-one to eighteen years.

It was also proposed that Janet, a bondsdog, much liked on the streets, be organized as a mascot of the Jessen Co. fire.

SINGING THE PRAISES OF THE FRUITFUL HEN.

The Rev. Dr. Rose, in a sermon on the practical side of the Golden Rule, declares that farmers of Kansas and Oklahoma are suffering today because the owners of the Panama Pacific Exposition are doing the work of the Southern States poultry show. Kansas advocates of the hen declare that she will soon become a rival of the wheat and corn fields as a source of wealth. Facts and figures that are supporting arguments as to the value of the Kansas egg crop. During the state exposit who are wise to the ways of the hen will tell how to make her lay all winter, how to make poultry pay to run by four inch yards of city houses and other secrets.

TWO RAILWAY LABOR LEADERS WHO SEEK TO AVERT BIG STRIKE

Whether federal mediation, sought by the railway department of the American Federation of Labor, results in a settlement of the switchmen's strike on the Hill lines or not it is believed that a concerted demand will be made for an increase of wages by 200,000 trainmen and other employees of the operating departments of the eastern lines within a few days. Henry B. Perham of the American Federation of Labor asked for a conference with President Taft and the interstate commerce commission with a view to ending the present strike. He and many other labor leaders say the American Railway association is acting concertedly to prevent wage increases. Unofficial requests have been made for increases by the operating employees of several eastern lines and have received little encouragement; hence the talk of extending the strike. Frank T. Hawley, head of the switchmen's organization believes the strike will spread. The increases demanded range from 5 to 40 per cent above the present wage scale. Concerted action to secure this increase will be taken by the following organizations: The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, including switchmen; the Order of Railroad Conductors, the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers and the grand lodge of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

FLORIDA SUMMER CLIMATE HAS NO SUPERIOR ANYWHERE.

A travel-worn people are in Florida on account with the climate during the present season. Many of them have expressed a fear that it may be quite hot here, would not be able to stand the climate of Florida in the summer time.

The fears of these people are groundless. There are thousands of people now living in Florida who had the same ideas when they first came to Florida, and the first year or two before coming to this state they packed up and went north for the summer months. Then, after awhile, they began staying later and later in the season until, finally, they remained for the summer months. Ask these people how the climate in the summer time compares with the climate in the cool majority of the country.

A little investigation will convince anyone that Florida is not only an ideal winter resort but that the summer months in Florida are far more pleasant, as a rule than in many of the northern sections of the country. Peninsula Florida lies down between the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico, practically inviting the cool breezes from one or the other of these great bodies of water.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 10—The case of Mrs. Annette Stewart Ford, who has been indicted on charge of blackmail and receiving stolen money, was called for trial in the criminal court today. Mrs. Stewart Ford is known as "the woman in the Warriner case." Charles L. Warriner, convicted local treasurer of the Big Four railroad, in whose accounts there was a shortage of $141,000, is scheduled to be the star witness. Warriner, who has already been sentenced to six years imprisonment for the embezzlement, has charged that Mrs. Stewart Ford received much of the money he stole from the railroad. The woman, on the other hand, declares that she can disprove the charges made against her and hints at startling revelations involving persons prominent in the business and social life of the city.

GOLDFIELD COMPANY HAS 25 MILES OF GOLD ORE.

STARTLING FIGURES AND ESTIMATES WILL BE SUBMITTED TO THE STOCKHOLDERS TODAY

EVANSTON, Wyo., Jan. 10—Stockholders of the Goldfield Consolidated Mines Company will be notified today of the annual meeting. The annual report of the manager will be submitted and will embody a complete description of the year's operations, showing the exact tonnage mined and treated, together with the value of the ore from every separate part of the vast workings, which are now in excess of 25 miles, and will contain estimates of the available ore reserves, based upon exhaustive surveys that have been in progress for some time past.

Heretofore the management has always refused to be committed to an estimate of ore reserves, and it is freely predicted that the figures given will come as a surprise to many who are unfamiliar with the magnitude and richness of the deposits already blocked out in these mines.

FLORIDA SUMMER CLIMATE HAS NO SUPERIOR ANYWHERE.

A great many people now in Florida are charmed with the climate during the present winter season but some have expressed a fear that if they locate here they would not be able to stand the climate of Florida in the summer time.

The fears of these people are groundless. There are thousands of people now living in Florida who had the same ideas when they first came to Florida, and the first year or two after coming to the state they packed up and went north for the summer months. Peninsula Florida juts down between the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico, constantly receiving the salt breezes from one or the other of these great bodies of water.

The climatic conditions of Florida differ from those of any and all other states in the union. Elevation above sea level, degrees of latitude, the courses of prevailing winds, the distribution of rainfall and atmospheric pressure, all influence climate according to geographical position. No State in Florida has an elevation of more than 300 feet above sea level and consequently the climate must partake of that of an island in character.

The state may be truly styled as "the one Florida in all the world." There is no other to compare with which it may be parallelled. During the summer months in Florida almost daily showers cool the air making the climate not only bearable but invigorating. The air often shows by the thermometer to be hot, is always fresh with the constant breezes and healthful with the odor of the pine. The same temperature in the North would be considered be most intolerable, debilitating and even fatal, but in Florida, where one can seek the shade the breeze and comfortably warm side of the street uncomfortably warm that he seldom knows what hot weather is. One of Daytona's crowning glories is her incomparable beach. No one who ever set foot upon its smooth, packed sands; no one who ever pedaled a bicycle over its expanse; no one who ever drove a prancing pair of horses and listened to the popping of their steel shoes upon its asphaltum-like face; no one who ever steered a high-power automobile down the broad stretch of wave-washed and surf-packed sand but realized that it is a world-beater, a world-wonder. Go stand upon this wide speedway and see the happy souls flit by in joyous mood, and answer whether this is not one of the seven modern wonders.

The Placid, Pellucid Halifax River.

Where think you is water with more picturesque surroundings? Nowhere. Softly, dreamily, glistens the tropical river, its surface, at times, ruffled with rippling breezes, its bosom dotted here and there in countless numbers with fishing craft, upon her bosom, as it were, to those with rod and reel, her beauty lies, and with such rod and reel and anoxy thing of the kind, which is about as if for the story of bobbing upon the waves, watch that lubberly old white-headed pelican poised a fat minute, and that fish hawk struggling skyward with his floundering load he snatched from the water.

See the beautiful beaches, quick and easy, the bathers and indeed indeed with refreshments both solid and liquid ready to a minute upon the beautiful surface. Take our word for it, stand and watch the polo game, and then you'll be a boy or girl again, and a happy one at that, and you'll wonder why you ever left the rendezvous.

The Enchantingly Picturesque Ridge-wood.

Ridgewood avenue is upon the crest of a broad ridge, straight as the crow flies and the wide spreading branches of the heavy-crushed live oaks extend their giant arms across the magnificent vista, forming an arch, and from these extended arms great festoons of Spanish moss sway as the trade winds from the tropical heights there. Looking straight ahead down the white shell street one has the impression of a fairy path with ethin draperies, but as you move along and cast an eye first to the right and then to the left you see discriminated cottage homes in the most delightful settings.

To see the alluring best of the pretty cottages which nature has furnished in one entire section of the city, and the pellucid bathes with their borders of citrus fruit and sweetbay palms, see the locals bathe with its exquisite berry, see the climbing vines on the fences and in the yards, the luxuriant forms which gain a foothold on the fences and walls, and you will feel as if you were in the land of the lotus eaters.

Surpassing Beauty of Our Cottage Homes.

No one of Daytona's attractions, perhaps, commands more unstinted praise than the cottage. The owners of these charming villas built from every corner of the country and they bring with them the ideals built

The Placid, Pellucid Halifax River.

Where think you is water with more picturesque surroundings? Nearly a mile wide, fringed with tropical vegetation, artistic cottages with roomy verandas looking out upon her bosom, gamey food fishes in countless numbers beckoning, as it were, to those with rod and reel: her bosom flecked with duck and coot and snowy-winged sea birds, which sit about as if for the sport of bobbing upon the waves; watch that lubberly old white headed pelican pouch a fat mullet, and that fish hawk struggling upward with his floundering load he snatched from the water.

See the beautiful launches, spick and span, their hampers and lockers bulging with refreshments both solid and liquid ready for a cruise upon th beautiful surface. Take out your fiel glass and sweep the river from Ormondg bride to Ponce Park light house, then say whether the Halifax isn't a thing of beauty and a joy forever, and one of the modern wonders.

The Enchantingly Picturesque Ridgewood.

Ridgewood avenue is upon the crest of a broad ridge, straight as the crow flies and the wide-spreading branches of the heavy-trunked live oaks extend their giant arms across the magnificent vista, forming an arch, and from these extended arms great festoons of Spanish moss sway as the trade winds from the tropic seas fan them . Looking straight ahead down this white shell street one has the impression of a fairy path with elfish draperies, but as you move along and cast an eye first to the right and then to the left you see distinguished cottage homes in the most delightful settings.

See the glistening leaf of the grand magnolia which nature has varnished as no artists' brush ever could; and the cabbage palms with their burdens of showy fruit and swaying palms; see the lovely holly with its exquisite berry; see the climbing vines run riot in the trees; see the cryptogamous forms which gain a foothold on the great oaks and stately palms, and surely you will join in the chorus and say that this is a world wonder for beauty .

Surpassing Beauty of Our Cottage Homes.

No one of Daytona's attractions, perhaps, commands more nearly universal attention and praise than does the artisic cottages . The owners of these charming villas hail from every corner of the country and they bring their own architectural plans and build upon them, and, as the architecture of one section of the country differs from the architecture of another, so do our homes differ in outward appearance and structural beauty fror one another. There are no monotonous rows of strikingly similar buildings but the eye, as it sweeps by, is treated to a kaleidoscopic change which keeps the mind wondering, "What next?"

It is not only the exterior of many of thsee homes which rivets attention; within they are models of convenience, and the finishing and furnishing give evidence of the elegance and cultivation of those who worked it all out. Indeed, it is the interior arrangement and artistic furnishing and shading, more than the exterior appearance that gives a surpassing charm to Daytona homes . This feature justly merits prominence as another wonder.

Streets and Pavements the Most and Best.

Why the Architect oof the Universe chose to give Daytona the most admirable, the most picturesque natural setting of all the cities of the South is not revealed, but that such is a fact must be apparent to the most superficial observer. With such lavish wealth of natural beauty it became an easy thing for the hand of man to give the finishing touches which have wrought out the colors and outlines of the big picture.

Man did all this in the laying out of the streets with their wide margins of parkage. The entire city becomes a great park, with driveways intersecting. miles upon miles of driveways so good as to attract motorists from all over the continent.

And as for the pavements, pavements that look and act like granite, —where else between the eastern and western seas are so many miles in proportion to inhabitants? The pavement question stands with the street as one of the chief drawing cards. Till some unheard of place reports more and better, Daytona throws down the gauntlet to the world.

Squirrels, Flowers, Birds and Frut.

Whatever oone's shortcomings and however indifferent or even callous one may be to many things, the mere mention of "flowers and Squirrels, birds and fruits" will send a thrill that is reflected in distended pupils and pricked ears.

For every visitor with a spare goober there is a bunny ready to come and accept your gift. He will sit bolt upright and knaw into the meat, casting furtive, saucy glances at you meanwhile.

Flowers. Usually fresh and blooming the year 'round You are reminded of Goldsmith's couplet where

Smiling spring its earliest visit paid
And summer's lingering blossoms are delayed.

In one yard roses of varigated hues predominate; another household has a penchant for the poincetta and the premises are aflame; another is hidden in a jungle of tall cane. Variety is the spice of life and here is where you find it.

The birds flit in, and with their joyous notes help to give fullness and symmetry to the picture .

As for fruits, choice citrus fruits, Daytona yields the palm to none for quality and quantity per acre. There are scores of citrus groves in proximity to the city, branches bending to the earth with their burdens of luscious golden globes, which for beauty, proflicacy and all desirable qualities would truly astonish you.

The Fastest Autos and The Finest Out.

The seventh world wonder, do you ask? Come, whether from Missouri or from Maine, from Kalamazoo or Timbuekto, and you will be "shown." Here is where the world's record for speed is broken with every recurring season. Autos, the biggest, the fastest, and the finest are on dally parad and the big show is as free as the pure artesian water from the thousands of flowing wells. It is a continuous show with constantly shifting scene.

Everything goes, from a 2-horse power, up to a 200-horse power, and all degrees of speed from a mixer to a two-mile-a-minute clip. You will quickly catch the spirit, when you find roads and the beach are yours, the Florida sunshine is free, the balmy ocean breezes are free, the birds and squirrels and flowers are free, the sparkling fountain water is free and you will have to go down into your wallet only for coin for auto, meal bod and board.

This is no fanciful picture: it's all here. It is drawing other thousands and holding them enthralled, it will charm and hold you. Come and see.

SEABREEZE and DAYTONA BEACH, two enterprising and pregressive towns on the Halifax Peninsula, are geographically one although incorporated as separate municipalities. The towns parallel the peninsnla north and south for a distance of from three and one-half to four miles, and extend east and west from the surging seas of the Atlantic Ocean to the Halifax River, the beautiful tide-water stream that sets them apart from Daytona with which they have close communion by means of three bridges, as well as a half-hour ferry service.

Seabreeze and Daytona Beach are essentially summer and winter resorts and are making hundreds of new friends every year among those who desire to escape the discomforting extremes of heat and cold, and their hotels and boarding houses are now receiving splendid patronage from the most discriminating class of tourists.

The mean average temperature. 80 degrees in the summer and 70 degrees in the winter, with an occasional extra rise or drop of a few days' duration, marks this as one of the most healthful locations in any section of the country, north, east, south or west.

The ocean itself, with its marvelous beach, hard as macadam and smooth as a floor, is the greatest attraction, although earth and air and sky seem to have entered into a combination to enhance its every charm. The beach is the famous automobile race course where every world's straightaway record has been made, and all these records it continues to hold without rivalry.

The sand of this famous speedway is composed largely of the shells of the coquina clam, which are about one-half inch long and very thin. For ages Nature has been rolling them up, washing them back into the surf and pulverizing them. Examined under the microscope each particle is round, unfit for mortar, builders say, because its smoothness prevents its holding together, yet, strange to contemplate, the very moment a wave leaves the wet, apparently soft beach, these round particles settle down into a cement almost as hard as asphalt, beyond the comprehension of one who has not seen it. Repairs are unnecessary, as twice each 24 hours it is entirely rebuilt by the tides. The beach has a width of 300 to 500 feet, and can be used from two hours after until two hours before high tide, thus giving an average of seven or eight hours for automobiling some part of each day.

Seabreeze and Daytona Beach each have a permanent population of approximately 1500. Sanitary ordinances are strictly enforced, streets and sidewalks are well kept, and new streets are being opened as fast as the increasing population demands. Besides hotels and boarding houses there is ample cottage accomodation for all winter visitors.

Seabreeze contains a handsome opera house and a Congregational Church; at Daytona Beach is a M. E. Church. An excellent high school is situated near the division line between the two towns. Both towns have enterprising business establishments, as is evidenced by the advertisements on the left and right.

All the attractiveness of Seabreeze applies to Daytona Beach, the two towns being so similarly situated. The development of Daytona Beach has been fully as phenomimal as its sister on the north, and each year there is a substantial growth. The great sand dunes have been leveled and handsome homes have been built for both winter and all-year-round occupancy. Flowering shrubs have been planted, which are covered with a wealth of bloom both summer and winter.

Work of rebuilding the Clarendon hotel is now in progress. This magnificent fire-proof structure, which is to contain 250 rooms, when completed will be the peer of any hotel in Florida. The site is immediately north of the clubhouse of the Florida East Coast Automobile Association.

The Ocean Pier is a great attraction to fishermen and it is lined summer and winter with enthusiastic disciples of Iziak Walton, who find it nothing unusual to land reb weighing several hundred pounds.

With its ancient ruins dating back to a time when the history of man runneth not, interlaced with wires of the modern telegraph and telephone, its miles of shell streets as hard and smooth as a floor and over-arched by hoary forest giants that grew in stately grandeur during the lapse of bygone centuries, New Smyrna is truly a place of romance and rest.

All nature here is very inviting to the tourist and pleasure-seeker. Here too is to be found the best fishing and hunting in the State of Florida.

The people are thrifty, the business men enterprising, and all unite in extending the welcome hand of hospitality to strangers. There are five church edifices for white people and an equal number for the colored population; the town has an excellent high school, a splendid public library, and up-to-date business houses.

There are any number of pretty homes for the permanent population, which numbers close to 2,000, and some very fine winter residences. There are good hotels and boarding houses where you can find accommodations to meet your requirements.

Adjoining New Smyrna is as fine a section of vegetable land as can be found anywhere. This land has been divided into small tracts which can be bought at reasonable prices. Some of the finest celery grown in the State is raised on this land. All other vegetables grow in abundance, and here, too, is the home of the famous Indian River oranges.

New Smyrna has no bonded indebtedness and the tax levy is low.

A point that no tourist should fail to visit is the ruins of the Old Spanish Mission which stand somber and alone about one and a quarter miles southwest of New Smyrna. A good road leads to the place and the trip can be easily made by an automobile. Silent, in the great pine flats by the margin of the forest, is this place of pilgrimage for the pious; this rendezvous for the picnicker. The ruins are extensive, and while there is no authentic history of their origin, it is presumed that the Mission was built by the Franciscans in the days when the once powerful Kingdom of Spain first planted its flag upon what is now American soil. It was built of coquina, the reef being of the same material, cut into thin slabs and covered with cement plaster. Extensive gardens surrounded it, which were enclosed by a stone wall, portions of which still remain. Visitors usually come in parties merry and carious but the spell of the place soon falls upon them and they separate in an silence, silent and meditative, under the arches or beside the ancient well.

CORONADO

is situated on the peninsula opposite New Smyrna and is connected by a good road and bridge over the deep current of Indian River. Here you can put aside your accumulated cares, troubles, to laugh and sing the carry home of the unbridged; you can wait to your heart's content with rod and reel in pool or surf for the gamest denizen of the deep, and when you return with a basket of fish that will make your neighbors envious, you can tell them that you have had a day of real sport.

The great waterway of Indian River is over a mile wide at this point, and a short distance to the north the channel from the sea beneath the bridge. From verandas, upper balconies and windows you can feast the magnificent river, the distant lagoons and islands, the forest-covered peninsula and the vast reaches of the Atlantic Ocean.

HAWKS PARK

A pretty village located along the ridge above the Indian River two and one-half miles south of New Smyrna and connected with fine shell roads. There is the appearance of newness, comfort and seclusion about the place which stamps it as the abode of people who come here to enjoy the blessings of outdoor life away from places where crowds are apt to gather.

DeLAND, the county seat of Volusia County, is situated 23 miles southwest of Daytona and is reached from the latter city by an excellent hard-surface road recently constructed.

At DeLand is located the John B. Stetson University, one of the leading educational institutions of the South. Because of the interest in matters educational DeLand is known as "The Athens of Florida."

Stetson University has a faculty of 30 professors and instructors. There are over $400,000 in buildings and equipment; nearly $300,000 endowment; a Carnegie Library alone representing an investment in building, endowment and books, of more than $130,000. The library is the United States Government depository for the State of Florida, and contains over 15,000 volumes. Science Hall, one of the newest of 16 buildings, with its furnishings, represents an outlay of $60,000. Elizabeth Hall is one of the most beautiful college buildings in the South.

The city has a population of about 3,500, with a thickly settled country adjacent. DeLand proper is five miles east of the St. Johns River, on the high, rolling pine land of the great "Orange Ridge" of Florida.

The predominating products are oranges and grapefruit, the estimated crop from this vicinity being over 300,000 boxes this year. Grapes, peaches, pears, Japan persimmons, plums, guavas, strawberries and other fruits are grown in plenty.

In the way of public improvements are many miles of fine shell streets, an excellent high school, electric lights, a system of waterworks that is owned and operated by the city, supplying the purest water at little cost.

Nine houses of worship testify that DeLand is a church-going community. Baptists, Episcopalians, Methodists (Northern and Southern), Presbyterians, Christians and Catholics besides colored Baptists and Methodists are represented.

The graded school offers a ten years course, and the building which it occupies is newly furnished throughout, and is one of the most commodious and best equipped public schools in the State.

The trip from Daytona to DeLand is made by automobile in a little over an hour, and there are many pretty drives in the vicinity of the county site. A good road leads to DeLeon Springs, five miles, a historic spot, where 60,000 gallons of water bubble from the earth every minute.

From DeLand automobiles go south to Osteen, 18 miles, on shell and sand roads, the St. Johns is crossed by ferry near Osteen and cars can thus continue to Sanford and Orlando by hard road. There is a shell road from DeLand to Orange City, five miles, and a good road from DeLand to Lake Helen, a like distance.

PORT ORANGE is a pretty little village situated five miles south of Daytona on the Daytona-New Smyrna hard-surface road, the scenic highway of the East Coast. The town is located on the Halifax River, over which spans a bridge from the town to the peninsula opposite.

The town is well laid out and has many pretty homes owned and occupied by residents and tourists. It has a fine colonial church, one of the best graded schools in Volusia county, two general stores, a real estate agency and two or three hotels.

A large number of tourists and winter residents make Port Orange their headquarters on account of the excellent fishing and hunting to be had in the vicinity. Port Orange is also a favorite point for automobile parties to stop for lunch, as it is the first town of any size south of Daytona. At one time all the oysters used in Port Orange restaurants were taken from the old mill, but a vast supply has been found in the river in front of the town.

A pretty automobile or carriage drive from Daytona to Port Orange is through the orange groves on the Dixie Ormond Road, across the Halifax River and then running through Port Orange to the coast of the ocean and the beach, and returning to Daytona by the road on the mainland. This route affords a very pleasing variety of scenery.

With its ancient ruins dating back to a time when the history of man runneth not, interlaced with wires of the modern telegraph and telephone, its miles of shell streets as hard and smooth as a floor and over-arched by hoary forest giants that grew in stately grandeur during the lapse of bygone centuries, New Smyrna is truly a place of romance and rest.

All nature here is very inviting to the tourist and pleasure-seeker. Here too is to be found the best fishing and hunting in the State of Florida.

The people are thrifty, the business men enterprising, and all unite in extending the welcome hand of hospitality to strangers. There are five church edifices for white people and an equal number for the colored population; the town has an excellent high school, a splendid public library, and up-to-date business houses.

There are any number of pretty homes for the permanent population, which numbers close to 2,000, and some very fine winter residences. There are good hotels and boarding houses where you can find accomodations to meet your requirements.

Adjoining New Smyrna is as fine a section of vegetable land as can be found anywhere. This land has been divided into small farms which can be bought at reasonable prices. Some of the finest celery grown in the State is raised on this land. All other vegetables grow in abundance, and here, too, is the home of the famous Indian River oranges.

A point that no tourist should fail to visit is the ruins of the Old Spanish Mission which stand somber and alone about one and a quarter miles southwest of New Smyrna. A good road leads to the place and the trip can be easily made by an automobile. Silent, in the great pine flats by the margin of the forest, is this place of pilgrimage for the pious; this rendezvous for the picnicker. The ruins are extensive, and while there is no authentic history of their origin, it is presumed that the Mission was built by the Franciscans in the days when the once powerful Kingdom of Spain first planted its flag upon what is now American soil.. It was built of coquina, the roof being of the same material, cut into thin slabs and covered with cement plaster. Extensive gardens surrounded it, which were enclosed by a stone wall, portions of which still remain. Visitors usually come in parties merry and curious but the spell of the place soon falls upon them and they separate to sit alone, silent and meditative, under the arches or beside the ancient well.

CORONADO

Is situated on the peninsula opposite New Smyrna and is connected by a good road and bridge over the deep current of Indian River. Here you can put aside your conventional garb, breathe in large and deep the salty tonic of the sea and enjoy yourself to your heart's content with rod and reel in row or sail boat or in the ocean surf a short half-mile away. The great varieties of fish inhabiting the river and lagoon pass through the channel from the sea beneath the bridge. From verandas, upper balconies and windows you behold the magnificent river, the distant lagoons and islands, the forest-covered peninsula and the vast reaches of the Atlantic Ocean.

HAWKS PARK

A pretty village located along the ridge above the Indian River two and one-half miles south of New Smyrna and connected with fine shell roads. There is the appearance of newness, comfort and seclusion about the place which stamps it as the abode of people who come here to enjoy the blessings of outdoor life away from places where crowds are apt to gather.

ORMOND is five miles north of Daytona, located on the western bank of the Halifax River. The location of the town permits of good drainage and perfect sanitation; the elevation is superb and ideal for winter homes. A wide bridge connects Ormond with Ormond Beach.

Many fine residences are maintained on either side of the river, most of them embellished with subtropical flora and shrubbery, besides thrifty orange and other citrus fruit trees.

The town is very cosmopolitan, has an excellent graded school, several churches, a fine public library, up-to-date places of business and comfortable and convenient hotels and boarding houses.

Ormond has many of the Florida attractions—fine fruit, good fishing, excellent automobiling, safe boating, salubrious climate and pleasant walks and drives.

At Ormond Beach is located the large Hotel Ormond, and its lesser sister, Bretton Inn. The former occupies a position overlooking the Halifax River, while the latter has as its outlook the magnificent beach and the broad Atlantic.

The walks in all directions are particularly attractive, and the arbors, shady and inviting spots and romantic nooks are crowded with rustic seats which are mute invitations to enter into the enjoyment thereof.

Besides the broad, smooth ocean beach there are many drives for carriage or automobile—long drives and short drives; drives through groves of golden oranges; drives through dense tropical forests to Spanish ruins; drives to the ancient Causeway built by the slaves of planters of long ago, and drives to the plantations of hospitable settlers, whose places are replete with the interest of Southern fruits and flowers.

One of these interesting plantations is Number Nine, located on the peninsula, five miles north of the Hotel Ormond. Here you see a fine orange grove, together with great varieties of other sub-tropical fruits and flowers.

Five miles further on you come to Moundgrove, one of the finest orange groves in this section of Florida. Moundgrove is on the headwaters of the Halifax River and is amid pretty surroundings. The place is reached by a good road [passing Number Nine] and is a drive all tourists may enjoy.

Port Orange is in the orange belt and a number of very fine citrus groves are nearby, where oranges, tangerines and grape-fruit hang in profusion. Some of the best trucking land in the State is to be found thereabout and excellent crops are raised.

West of Port Orange a short distance are the remains of the old Dunlawton sugar mill, a spot that is visited every year by hundreds of tourists. At one time all the country west of Port Orange, surrounding the old mill, was a vast sugar-cane and indigo plantation. The mill was operated extensively in those days but has been in disuse for thirty or forty years.

A pretty automobile or carriage drive from Daytona is via the ocean beach to the approach of the Port Orange bridge, across the bridge and then passing through Port Orange to the ruins of the celebrated old sugar mill, returning to Daytona by the road on the mainland. This drive affords a very pleasing variety of scenery.

WATSON WILL NOT SPEAK IN PHILADELPHIA TONIGHT

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 19—Watson will not speak tonight. The poet with the caustic pen, who achieved fame by "The Woman With the Serpent's Tongue," is far away, and there is grief in the hearts of the members of the Contemporary Club. Some months ago the poet promised to come to Philadelphia and speak before the club, which is composed of some of the foremost highbrows of the city and university. January 19 was the date set, and all was apparently settled, signed and sealed. Then came the unfortunate episode of the poet's attack on the Asquith's and Mr. Watson withdrew his acceptance of the invitation to address the club.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS SINCE NOTED LAWYER WAS BORN

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Jan. 19—One hundred years ago today, in Somerset county, this State, was born Jeremiah S. Black, one of the most noted members of the American bar and a prominent figure in the stirring events preceding the outbreak of the civil war. As Attorney General in President Buchanans' cabinet, Judge Black was an ardent supporter of the Union. When Abraham Lincoln became president Judge Black retired from public life. He returned to the practice of law at his home, near York, and in the last twenty years of his life earned one of the greatest reputations in the bar of this State and Pennsylvania.

OKLAHOMA FIGHTING THE WHITE PLAGUE

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 19—At the Anti-Tuberculosis Congress, just closed here today, Dr. J. C. Waterhouse, State Commissioner of health, is leading the establishment of a tuberculosis dispensaries in all of the larger cities of Oklahoma, where the poor may be given free treatment for the dread disease. Gov. Haskell and other state officials, as well as physicians, newspaper men, educators, club women, lawyers and clergymen, have interested themselves in the movement against the white plague. The campaign will continue through tomorrow.

A GRAY SABBATH.

Sunday was one of the infrequent, soft gray days that sometimes come to us as the result of low temperature and bituminous coal smoke or wind. It rained a little yesterday night, and those attending early communion and mass were garbed in baptismal dress from trim the head of nature to the accumulation of mud here became discouraging on the branches of the trees and still in sodden sleeves.

All nature was a contrast in gray. The long promenade line of elms walk trees dressed in flowing robes of grey moss, the dead leaves clinging to the ground, the gray squirrels "across the gray lots" on the giant oaks, blending with their burden of age, while here and there the dark green foliage of a banana or magnolia or the yellow of the jessamine contrasted the general greyness of the picture. This was beautiful Ridgewood avenue.

At eleven o'clock the church goers, armed with umbrellas or raincoats, were wending their ways in different directions churchward, and the pastors held forth to their congregations in spite of the weather. Because of it, for such is due to the promising to entertain parties, either hosting or entertaining.

Towards five o'clock the clouds cleared a little from the west and the sun touched the green fringes on the east banks of the beautiful Halifax, and fell across upon the ocean river, which all day had been a dull gray color shining burnished with green.

A north wind sprang up and the the new boats began to drift, reminder on the larger ones. The setting red was reflected in pale gold upon the waters of the river, the dismistly faded away and a silver sky was lost in a gray haze, with the shining stars glinting dimly through the general greyness of nature, mourning the sun in absence. At 8 o'clock Monday, the week-going world is astir and the gray Sunday has passed into a memory.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

SMALL HINGES.

A little man of about came shyly forward the small office. Two weeks when, tired with her shopping, she sat down on a stool in the notions department.

Mrs. Jones owned a hotel and was buying supplies.

It was the boy's next day at the counter. He had just been promoted from the stock room, where he had made good.

"What is the best of investing worth —hotel rates?"

The stranger's eyes twinkled.

"I'll have to ask the head of the department. This is my first day selling goods. Please excuse me, madam, for I am a novice."

He trotted to the office and returned made inquiry.

"Are you the lady who wants a wife? Isn't that the information you want?"

The boy's face fell, but—

"What was it? What is it you want to the department agent of the goods?"

Mrs. Jones smiled, and when the man came forward, briefly telling the hotel, Mrs. Jones said:

"Excuse me, but I am waiting on the boy. I'm sorry, very sorry that he has got a raise in salary and is now head of the department.

A little thing to do, but—

It was a big thing to the boy and gave him a fine start upward.

The fact is—

LITTLE things are the HINGES on which BIG things TURN.

And you—

Probably you will never be able to do big things in a big way, but you can put in a several things here and there.

Can't you?

A Question For the King.

Probably such forgetfulness reached its climax in the case of Charles II., who asked Sir Isaac Newton, who was then in the zenith of his fame, the cause of certain effects. The king, struck by the answer, asked him why he had not made the experiment. "Why, sir," replied Sir Isaac, "I never thought it worth my while." ### WATSON WILL NOT SPEAK IN PHILADELPHIA TONIGHT

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10—Watson will not speak tonight. The poet with the caustic pen, who achieved fame by "The Woman With the Serpent's Tongue," is far away, and there is grief in the hearts of the members of the Contemporary Club. Some months ago the poet promised to come to Philadelphia and speak before the club, which is composed of some of the foremost highbrows of the city and university. January 10 was the date set, and all was apparently settled, signed and sealed. Then came the unfortunate episode of the poet's attack on the Asquith's and Mr. Watson withdrew his acceptance of the invitation to address the club.

The congress will continue through tomorrow.

A GRAY SABBATH.

Sunday was one of the infrequent, soft gray days that sometimes come to us as the result of low temperature and blizzards raging in the north or west. It rained a little Saturday night, and those attending early communion and mass were sprinkled in baptismal dews fresh from the hand of nature as the accumulation of moisture became overburdened on the branches of the trees and fell in sudden showers.

All nature was a symphony in gray. The long processional line of sidewalk trees dressed in flowing robes of grey moss; the dead leaves floating to the ground, the gray squirrels 'gainst the gray bark of the giant oaks, bending with their burden of age, while here and there the dark green foliage of a handsome magnolia or the occasional red or yellow of the maple or hickory only accentuated the general grayness of the picture. This was beautiful Ridgewood avenue.

At eleven o'clock the church goers, armed with umbrellas or raincoats, were wending their ways in different directions churchward, and the pastors held forth to fair congregations in spite of the weather or perhaps, because of it, for such a day is not promising to excursion parties, either boating or automobiling.

Towards five o'clock the clouds cleared a little from the west and the sun touched the green fringes on the east banks of the beautiful Halifax, and fell aslant upon the gray river, which all day had been like a gray satin ribbon bordered with green. A north wind sprang up and the little row boats began to dance attendance on the larger ones. The evening red was reflected in pale pink upon the waters of the river, but directly faded away and a gray day was lost in a gray night, with the evening stars glinting dimly through the general grayness of nature. This morning the sun is shining; it is brisk Monday, the work-a-day world is astir, and the gray Sunday has passed into a memory.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

SMALL HINGES.

A little runt of a boy came shyly forward to greet Mrs. Jones when, tired with her shopping, she sat down on a stool in the toweling department.

Mrs. Jones owned a hotel and was buying supplies.

It was the boy's first day at the counter. He had just been promoted from the stock room, where he had made good.

"What is this bolt of toweling worth —hotel rates?"

The stripling's eyes bulged.

"I'll have to ask the head of the department. This is my first day selling goods. Please excuse me, madam, for just a moment."

He rushed to the senior and eagerly made inquiry.

"Are you sure she wants a whole bolt?" said the department head. "Tell her I'll be there in a moment and wait on her myself."

The boy's face fell, but—

What was it? Was it something in the disappointed droop of the young salesman? Anyway, when the man came forward, briskly rubbing his hands, Mrs. Jones said:

"Excuse me; this boy is waiting on me. If you will give him prices we shall get along very well."

They did get along. And when the woman's bill was footed up it came to $90. Ninety dollars! Wouldn't they stare when he turned in his little sales book on his first day's showing?

The sequel?

The woman became a regular customer of the boy, who was always attentive and obliging, and brought her friends to the counter. Very soon the boy got a raise in salary and is now head of the department.

A little thing to do, but—

It was a big thing to the boy and gave him a fine start upward.

The fact is—

LITTLE things are the HINGES on which BIG things TURN.

And you!

Probably you will never be able to do big things in a big way, but you can put in a swivel hinge here and there.

Can't you?

A Question For the King.

Divinity doth not always hedge a king. There have been many rulers who could take us well as give in the joking line. The most striking instance of this kind is seen in the case of Charles II., that good natured Stuart, who once asked his chaplain, Dr. Stillingfleet:

"How is it that you always read your sermons before me when, as I understand, you can preach eloquently enough elsewhere without book or notes?"

The good doctor answered that he was so overwhelmed by his majesty's presence that he could not trust himself otherwise, continuing, "And now, sire, may it please you to tell me why you read your speeches when you have no such excuse?"—St. Louis Republic.

WHY?

Jan, son of a father killed in the mines, was aged fourteen. He was a sensitive child who read books beyond his years and passionately loved music.

But Jan was the man of the family at fourteen!

The morning of the awful fire in the mines Jan was in bed sick, and the doctor said he must stay, but he knew the rent was just due.

So the brave little fellow pinched his thin lips together and went to the shaft, the miner's lamp lighting up his pale little face and his poor lunch in his little tin bucket.

"We must not give up, little mother," he said as he kissed her goodby.

And she?

Leaning against the shaft house that fateful day, sobbing in her old brown shawl, the mother wailed:

"My God! I kissed him and sent him to his death! I sent him to die in that hell hole below there for $1.13."

Motherlike, blaming herself.

And when they got her to her home in the little shack, while the fiery inferno raged below, poor Barbara Stocek, robbed now of both husband and son by the Moloch of the mines, said to a woman reporter:

"Never again shall I be able to draw a full, long breath. Something clutches me when I look into the face of a child. I can see little Jan, my baby boy, lying there in the passage with his head resting on his arm and on his dead face the patient, loving smile he always had for me."

The poor woman grew hysterical and then, half crazed, talked proudly of how Jan read the big books.

"It was the old family coming back in him. Once, in the old country, his father's folks were nobles. Of late years they have been working people. Jan went to his death smiling, like many a man of his race before him."

Is it not an masterfully sad mystery?

Why should such a noble spirit as Jan's be blown out by the hellish flames of the pit when others, gross, sordid and unlovable, are permitted to quietly burn to their very embers?

To say there is no kind Providence then permits it to be so is to give over to black despair. We are sick to the belief that all mystery has a meaning.

One thing can be done.

The lives of Illinois say to her under the sign of sixteen shall be permitted to work in the bowels of the earth.

Two Long Golf Drives.

Two golf players determined to play a match by moonlight. The antagonists were in every respect worthy of each other, and as the match proceeded fortune did not appear to incline to either side. At last they came to a long hole, and to such it occurred at the same time that a critical moment had been reached and that it was necessary to adopt heroic measures. They drove off two long balls, which to the eyes of the ordinary spectators appeared to vanish into night far beyond all human powers of vision to follow.

But each of the combatants declared that he saw perfectly where his ball had gone, and they walked off with unfaltering steps in the direction of the hole. When they had gone about 180 yards neither began to show any signs of indecision. One had proceeded the place where he expected to find his ball. Both went on with unfaltering stride. At last when they got to the putting green, some hundred yards or so beyond the "long hole" Drive, both balls were found lying within a stone's length of the hole. Each player had contrived to drive a ball through a hole in his opponent's pocket.

What Hugo Was Doing.

Victor Hugo was a man of many moods. One day, "Les Miserables" was absorbing every attention; on the next he was busy with his children's toys. Of this latter period, an artist visitor tells the following story: "I found him on the floor, on his hands and knees, with his children mounted on his back. Two more were holding on to his coat tails, and he was trotting around the room, neighing like a horse. Presently he stopped, and, rising to his feet, he said, 'Now, my children, you must get off my back, for I have to write a book.'"

WHY?

Jan, son of a father killed in the mines, was aged fourteen. He was a sensitive child who read books beyond his years and passionately loved music.

But Jan was the man of the family at fourteen!

The morning of the awful fire in the mines Jan was in bed sick, and the doctor said he must stay, but he knew the rent was just due.

"We must not give up, little mother," he said as he kissed her goodby.

And she?

"My God! I kissed him and sent him to his death! I sent him to die in that hell hole below there for $1.13."

Motherlike, blaming herself.

And when they got her to her home in the little shack, while the fiery inferno raged below, poor Barbara Stocek, robbed now of both husband and son by the Moloch of the mines, said to a woman reporter:

"Never again shall I be able to draw a full, long breath. Something clutches me when I look into the face of a child. I can see little Jan, my baby boy, lying there in the passage with his head resting on his arm and on his dead face the patient, loving smile he always had for us."

The poor woman grew hysterical and then, half crazed, talked proudly of how Jan read the big books.

"It was the old family coming back in him. Once, in the old country, his father's folks were nobles. Of late years they have been working people. Jan went to his death smiling, like many a man of his race before him."

Is it not an unutterably sad mystery?

Why should such a noble spirit as Jan's be blown out by the hellish flames of the pit when others, gross, sordid and unheroic, are permitted to quietly burn to their very sockets?

To say there is no kind Providence that permits it to be so is to give over to blank despair. We are shut up to the belief that all mystery has a meaning.

One thing can be done.

The laws of Illinois say no boy under the age of sixteen shall be permitted to work in or about a mine.

The laws must avenge the death of Jan Stocek.

At last they came to a long hole, and to each it occurred at the same time that a critical moment had been reached and that it was necessary to adopt heroic measures. When they had gone about 180 yards neither began to show any signs of indicating that he had reached the place where he expected to find his ball. Both went on with unhesitating stride. At last when they got to the putting green, some hundred yards or so beyond the longest recorded drive, both balls were found lying within a club's length of the hole. Each player had arranged to drop a ball through a hole in his trousers pocket.

When Hugo Was Poor.

Victor Hugo was at the time of his death the wealthiest of nineteenth century authors. In his younger days, however, he knew the pangs of poverty, as after a quarrel with his father, General Hugo, he and his brother had their allowances stopped. "We made 800 francs last eighteen months. One chop would serve for lunch three days in succession. On the first day we would eat the lean, on the second day the fat, and on the third day we would suck the bone. We discovered a place in the Quartier Latin where for 15 sous (15 cents) we obtained a four course dinner, a bottle of wine and as much bread as we liked. For another sou we obtained the sweetest of smiles from the pretty girl who looked after us." This regime does not appear to have spoiled Hugo's digestion, for at the age of eighty-three he cracked nuts with his teeth and ate oranges as some people eat apples—peel and all.

The Elmsbury Ghost

It Appeared In Person to Mr. Ebenezer Pollock

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1903, by American Press Association.

"Going once! Going twice! Going three times and sold to Mr. Ebenezer Pollock for $1,900!"

"Didn't mean to damage a good customer," chuckled the man of the hammer as he pulled down the red flag above the gate and climbed into his buggy. "Come down to Lawyer Fitch's office bimeby, 'Neser, and we'll close the deal right and proper."

"Very well," said Ebenezer gruffly.

He watched the crowd of women tiptoeing out of the house and waited until the last one had passed through the gate, each with a curious glance at the new owner. He was aware that they marveled because he had bought a ghost ridden house.

When he was alone in the shadows of the tall oaks he looked up at the house, dark and forbidding in the midst of rank grass and weeds. Whatever had been its original color, it was now faded to a dingy mustard hue, blotted with the dark green of heavy wooden shutters tightly closed.

There were years and years when the shutters had never been closed. Those were the days before old Simon Elmsbury's granddaughter had run away with the schoolteacher and had in consequence been disinherited by the old man. Simon had left the house and land and furniture to the Foreign Missionary society, and now, five years after his death, they had put it up at auction, and Ebenezer had bought it at much below its real value.

It was well known that Simon would have opposed his granddaughter's marriage to any man. He was selfish enough to wish to keep her at his side to wait upon him, for she was the only relative he had.

"Let us come and live with you, grandfather," Cornelia had pleaded with her arms around his neck. "You will like Henry better when you know him." But the obdurate old man had angrily flung her aside, and the next day the girl had been married to Henry Stone and disappeared from Melville.

After that Simon Elmsbury closed the main part of the house and lived in the east wing for ten years, and then he died without one relenting word to Cornelia. The Stones had never been heard from since their departure from Melville. No one knew where they lived or even if they were alive. Old Simon Elmsbury went to the grave unattended by any relative.

Since Simon's death gossip had it that the house was haunted. On stormy nights, the credulous said, the old piano tinkled softly behind the closed shutters, and a woman's thin, sweet voice was heard singing in low tones. Snatches of this weird music could be heard sometimes in the lull of shrieking wind or dashing rain. On other nights all was still. Some claimed that Cornelia was dead and that her saved spirit came back to sing in the rooms of the old home, where she had spent a happy girlhood.

In spite of ghostly rumors, Ebenezer Pollock had suddenly made up his mind to give up boarding in the village hotel and occupy a home of his own. The Elmsbury place suited him. It was near his harness shop and the east wing was just large enough to serve his single purposes. As for the main portion of the house, he gave it over to rats and mice and mold.

Now he walked up the path and entered the front door, creaking rustily on its hinges in the south breeze that swept the yard. On the second floor a door banged loudly. Ebenezer started and then, with an exclamation of disgust, entered the house.

Ebenezer crashed in and out of the rooms filled with decaying furniture, carefully blowing out the candles. Upstairs the candles were disdainfully straight, and there was a draft in the large north bedroom as if from an open window, but all the windows were tightly shuttered and barred.

Once outside again, he turned the great brass key in the front door with an involuntary sigh of relief. The east wing had a separate entrance and was shut off from the rest of the house by a sealed door. A day's work by Black Anna would make the wing very habitable for him and his bachelor belongings. Ebenezer didn't want a housekeeper—he detested women.

He had lived in the Elmsbury place for three weeks before he heard the singing ghost. It was the 21st of September, and the equinoctial gale was shaking the old house to its very foundations. Ebenezer had gone to bed but he could not sleep. The wind screamed down the wide chimney and whistled around the windows. The roar of beating rain drowned all sound save the whistling wind. There were creaking sounds beyond the walls, and Ebenezer fell to thinking of the ghost.

It was then that the wind paused for breath and the rain fell more lightly. From a distance came the echoing jangle of an old piano touched by timid fingers and a mere thread of melody to a woman's voice; then the rain continued its monotonous beat, and he heard the music no more.

Ebenezer Pollock was angry. He resolved to lay the intruding ghost if possible, and so the next day when a watery sun rendered the house a little less Greary he lighted a lantern and unsealed the door that led into the other side of the house.

The house was quite as dusty and forlorn as on the day he had bought it. Strangely enough, Ebenezer did not look at the little piano which stood open just as Cornelia Elmsbury had left it so many years ago, with a yellowed sheet of music upon the rack. He scurried through the rooms with a half realization that some slender spirit was flitting through the rooms away from his contaminating presence.

A few weeks afterward there came another storm of wind and rain, and again he heard the ghostly music. Ebenezer had a twinge of the rheumatism that night, and he very irritably rapped on the wall with his cane. The music stopped abruptly, and he did not hear it again, although there were many storms that fall.

One winter evening, when the old house was wrapped in a blinding snowstorm, Ebenezer awoke from his first sleep with every muscle aching and drawing with pain. Rheumatism held him a captive. For hours he groaned dismally, conscious that the fire in his air tight stove was nearly out in a time when he needed heat. There was no ministering hand to apply hot flannels to his swollen joints and muscles or to allay his torture with soothing liniments.

It was then that the ghost came again—this time with groping fingers upon the sealed door. It knocked gently and spoke to him in faint, frightened whispers.

"Go away!" shouted Ebenezer wrathfully. "Go away, ma'am! It ain't proper that you should be loit'ring around here! Go away, I say!"

There was a silence, and presently Ebenezer's thick, grizzled hair stood almost upright on his head. Ghostly footsteps sounded in the rooms over his head and softly, tap, tap, tap, down the narrow staircase that opened into his bedroom.

Tall and slender and pale, she stood before him at last, her tender blue eyes filled with pitying tears. For here she was forty years old, but the hair framing her delicate face made her appear much younger.

"I could not bear to hear you moaning with pain all alone. My husband used to have rheumatism before he died, and I know just what to do," she said in a low tone.

"Ma'am!" gasped Ebenezer. "Ma'am!"

He watched her slender figure as it flitted to and fro about his rooms. She mended the fire, and soon its cheering warmth brought relief to his aching limbs. She heated water and flannel cloths and applied soothing liniments with very human fingers.

When the lines of suffering had relaxed and Ebenezer's face still sought hers questioningly she sat down in a low chair and spoke somewhat sadly.

"I'm Mrs. Stone—Cornelia Elmsbury that was. I've been living here four years."

"In the big back attic," said Cornelia, with a little smile. "It looks out on the tall chestnut woods, you know, and the short chimney comes out there. Grandfather left the cellar full of coal and wood. I've got it real comfortable up there, and on stormy nights I'd come down to the dark and play on my piano till you drove me away. I used to wish I could be Dutch or Chinese and get all my groceries and things. It was long work, but it was horrid to me to get home again after all I went through." She broke into tears.

"What made you hide? What did you do it for?" asked Ebenezer wildly.

"My husband was poor. He died and left a little invalid boy—just poor enough to buy my food and not enough to pay rent. My eyesight is so poor I cannot work, and so I thought I would come back here. I heard the place was shut up, and it was my own by rights. I knew I'd be driven out if any one knew I was here!"

"You poor little thing!" blurted Ebenezer pityingly. "Stay! Stay just as long as you like!" There was a long silence after that, while the little widow cried happily before the fire. Ebenezer was thinking rapidly. "If you ever go away, ma'am," he said, with a great blush, "I'll go after you and bring you back here and—" He paused.

It happened that one day the ghost deserted the Elmsbury house, and Ebenezer kept his word and went after her—and brought her back a bride to her old home.

His Little Joke.

This sign proved to be a good drawing card until a young man of humorous turn of mind came along and informed the landlord that he objected and after scrutinizing it closely called one of those station which looks to one any good. He waited until some of the omnipresent was watching, and taking out his handkerchief, he erased the letter "p" from the word "dant."

The transformation was complete, and it was not until a crowd had collected that the proprietor of the restaurant discovered why there was larger crowd outside than inside.

The Elmsbury Ghost

It Appeared In Person to Mr. Ebenezer Pollock

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.

"Going once! Going twice! Going three times and sold to Mr. Ebenezer Pollock for $1,900!"

"Didn't mean to damage a good customer," chuckled the man of the hammer as he pulled down the red flag above the gate and climbed into his buggy. "Come down to Lawyer Fitch's office bimeby, 'Nezer, and we'll close the deal right and proper."

"Very well," said Ebenezer gruffly.

He watched the crowd of women tiptoeing out of the house and waited until the last one had passed through the gate, each with a furtive glance at the new owner. He was aware that they marveled because he had bought a ghost ridden house.

When he was alone in the shadows of the tall oaks he looked up at the house, dark and forbidding in the midst of rank grass and weeds. Whatever had been its original color, it was now faded to a dingy mustard hue, blotted with the dark green of heavy wooden shutters tightly closed.

There were years and years when the shutters had never been closed. Those were the days before old Simon Elmsbury's granddaughter had run away with the schoolteacher and had in consequence been disinherited by the old man. Simon had left the house and land and furniture to the Foreign Missionary society, and now, five years after his death, they had put it up at auction, and Ebenezer had bought it at much below its real value.

It was well known that Simon would have opposed his granddaughter's marriage to any man. He was selfish enough to wish to keep her at his side to wait upon him, for she was the only relative he had.

"Let us come and live with you, grandfather," Cornelia had pleaded with her arms around his neck. "You will like Henry better when you know him." But the obdurate old man had angrily flung her aside, and the next day the girl had been married to Henry Stone and disappeared from Melville.

After that Simon Elmsbury closed the main part of the house and lived in the east wing for ten years, and then he died without one relenting word to Cornelia. The Stones had never been heard from since their departure from Melville. No one knew where they lived or even if they were alive. Old Simon Elmsbury went to the grave unattended by any relative.

Since Simon's death gossip had it that the house was haunted. On stormy nights, the credulous said, the old piano tinkled softly behind the closed shutters, and a woman's thin, sweet voice was heard singing in low tones. Snatches of this weird music could be heard sometimes in the lull of shrieking wind or dashing rain. On other nights all was still. Some claimed that Cornelia was dead and that her sweet spirit came back to sing in the rooms of the old home, where she had spent a happy girlhood.

In spite of ghostly rumors, Ebenezer Pollock had suddenly made up his mind to give up boarding in the village hotel and occupy a home of his own. The Elmsbury place suited him. It was near his harness shop, and the east wing was just large enough to serve his simple purposes. As for the main portion of the house, he gave it over to rats and mice and mold.

Now he walked up the path and entered the front door, creaking rustily on its hinges in the south breeze that swept the yard. On the second floor a door banged loudly. Ebenezer started and then, with an exclamation of disgust, entered the house.

Ebenezer creaked in and out of the rooms filled with decaying furniture, carefully blowing out the candles. Upstairs the candles were flickering strangely, and there was a chill in the large north bedroom as if from an open window, but all the windows were tightly shuttered and barred.

Once outside again, he turned the great brass key in the front door with an involuntary sigh of relief. The east wing had a separate entrance and was shut off from the rest of the house by a sealed door. A day's work by black Anna would make the wing very habitable for him and his bachelor belongings. Ebenezer didn't want a housekeeper—he detested women.

He had lived in the Elmsbury place for three weeks before he heard the singing ghost. It was the 21st of September, and the equinoctial gale was shaking the old house to its very foundations. Ebenezer had gone to bed, but he could not sleep. The wind screamed down the wide chimney and whistled around the windows. The roar of beating rain drowned all sound save the whistling wind. There were creaking sounds beyond the walls, and Ebenezer fell to thinking of the ghost.

It was then that the wind paused for breath and the rain fell more lightly. From a distance came the echoing jangle of an old piano touched by timid fingers and a mere thread of melody in a woman's voice; then the rain continued its monotonous beat, and he heard the music no more.

Ebenezer Pollock was angry. He resolved to lay the intruding ghost if possible, and so the next day when a watery sun rendered the house a little less dreary he lighted a lantern and unsealed the door that led into the other side of the house.

The house was quite as dusty and forlorn as on the day he had bought it. Strangely enough, Ebenezer did not look at the little piano which stood open just as Cornelia Elmsbury had left it so many years ago, with a yellowed sheet of music upon the rack. He scurried through the rooms with a half realization that some slender spirit was flitting through the rooms away from his contaminating presence.

A few weeks afterward there came another storm of wind and rain, and again he heard the ghostly music. Ebenezer had a twinge of the rheumatism that night, and he very irritably rapped on the wall with his cane. The music stopped abruptly, and he did not hear it again, although there were many storms that fall.

One winter evening, when the old house was wrapped in a blinding snowstorm, Ebenezer awoke from his first sleep with every muscle aching and drawing with pain. Rheumatism held him a captive. For hours he groaned dismally, conscious that the fire in his air tight stove was nearly out at a time when he needed heat. There was no ministering hand to apply hot flannels to his swollen joints and muscles or to allay his torture with soothing liniments.

It was then that the ghost came again—this time with groping fingers upon the sealed door. It knocked gently and spoke to him in faint, frightened whispers.

"Go away!" shouted Ebenezer wrathfully. "Go away, ma'am! It ain't proper that you should be loit'ring around here! Go away, I say!"

There was a silence, and presently Ebenezer's thick, grizzled hair stood almost upright on his head. Ghostly footsteps sounded in the rooms over his head and softly, tap, tap, tap, down the narrow staircase that opened into his bedroom.

Tall and slender and pale, she stood before him at last, her tender blue eyes filled with pitying tears. Perhaps she was forty years old, but the hair framing her delicate face made her appear much younger.

"I could not bear to hear you moaning with pain all alone. My husband used to have rheumatism before he died, and I know just what to do," she said in a low tone.

"Ma'am!" gasped Ebenezer. "Ma'am!"

He watched her slender figure as it flitted to and fro about his rooms. She mended the fire, and soon its cheering warmth brought relief to his aching limbs. She heated water and flannel cloths and applied soothing liniments with very human fingers.

When the lines of suffering had relaxed and Ebenezer's face still sought hers questioningly she sat down in a low chair and spoke somewhat sadly.

"I'm Mrs. Stone—Cornelia Elmsbury that was. I've been living here four years."

"In the big back attic," said Cornelia, with a little smile. "It looks out on the tall chestnut woods, you know, and the short chimney comes out there. Grandfather left the cellar full of coal and wood. I've got it real comfortable up there, and on stormy nights I'd come down in the dark and play on my piano till you drove me away. I used to walk over to Belton on dark evenings and get all my groceries and things. It was hard work, but it was heaven to me to get home again after all I went through!" She broke into sobs.

"What made you hide? What did you do it for?" asked Ebenezer excitedly.

"My husband was poor. He died and left a little insurance money—just enough to buy my food and not enough to pay rent. My eyesight is so poor I cannot work, and so I thought I would come back here. I heard the place was shut up, and it was my own by rights. I knew I'd be driven out if any one knew I was here!"

"You poor little thing!" blurted Ebenezer pityingly. "Stay here just as long as you like!" There was a long silence after that, while the little widow cried happily before the fire. Ebenezer was thinking rapidly. "If you ever go away, ma'am," he said, with a great blush, "I'll go after you and bring you back here and"— He paused.

His Little Joke.

This sign proved to be a good drawing card until a young man of humorous turn of mind came along. The latter, seeing the sign, stopped and after scrutinizing it closely smiled one of those smiles which bode no one any good. He waited until none of the employees was watching, and, taking out his handkerchief, he erased the letter "b" from the word "beat."

The transformation was complete, and it was not until a crowd had collected that the proprietor of the restaurant discovered why there was larger crowd outside than inside.
